This game is best played in pairs. To play this game, first download and print a board game and give one to each student pair. Each student will also need an eraser or something small that they can flick with their finger. Students have to take turns flicking their erasers to the top of the board game. If the eraser lands in an area with a picture of a classroom object, students should have a dialogue with that word. For example, Do you have an eraser? - Yes, I do. After a dialogue, the student who flicks the eraser must write his or her name in the area. Then, it's another student's turn. After 10 minutes or so, stop the game and the student with the most areas wins.
