make it easier for services to manage, track, and control web activity. This makes more sense than trying to reverse engineer support for all possible mobile browsers. As such, most of these apps instruct you to block all other browsers or restrict your child from installing any other apps at all. Some parental controls don't force your child to use their own browser on iOS devices. Rather, they leverage VPN technology, running internet connections through a local app to enable content filtering. You'll see the VPN icon when such a tool is active. Note that this does not mean that the child's connection is secured by a full-scale virtual private network, nor that the device's IP address is masked. Most of these browsers work the same way by blocking access to sites that fall under banned categories, including all the biggest criminals, such as file sharing, games, pornography, and violence. The best examples have no problem picking up on HTTPS encrypted traffic and blocking access to anonymizing proxies. Some apps, such as Net Nanny, allow you to create custom domains. The quality of browsing history reporting also varies from service to service. App blocking and time constraintsAn area where most mobile parental control solutions excel is in their ability to prevent children from using certain apps. This can come in handy for parents who want to prevent their children from using social media apps, messaging services that are difficult to monitor, or browsers that get around the defined web filters. Still, it can be difficult to keep track of every new app that your child installs. Even better are the services, such as Boomerang, that automatically block new apps that your child installs until you explicitly approve them. Mobicip allows you to whitelist only the apps you want your child to be able to use. App blocking works differently on iOS. You can block access to system apps like Safari, Camera, and Siri, if you want. You can also disable the iTunes Store and App Store, and ban in-app purchases. Some parental control apps can ever remove app icons completely from the Home screen, so there's no way your child can access them. Time constraints are another important feature of parental control apps. Some services, such as Norton Family Premier and Family Prem set schedules for specific apps and device usage, and set a total time allocation for your child that applies to each hardware they use access to the internet. Location reporting and emergencies mobile parental control app should at least be able to keep track of a child's current location and some historical location data as well. It is also important for them to offer some level of control over messages and the frequency of location reporting, to avoid bombarding Locategy, Boomerang, and FamilyTime, go a step further, allowing you to construct geofences around a location. For the uninitiated, geofences are digital boundaries around a physical location that helps parents keep track of when a child arrives in or leaves a certain location. Kaspersky Safe Kids also allows you to add a dimension of time to a geofence, so you can easily make sure that a child stays where they are supposed to be all day. Boomerang offers a unique feature, in that you can draw custom geofences on a map; second just create a circular radius around a point you define. Note that Android, iOS and Google Maps all let you track your child's location. One last feature worth mentioning is an SOS button. When a child presses this button, it sends out an alert to the parent and any other trusted contacts. The notification covers time and place information until either the child disables the alarm or the parent disables it from their own account. This works regardless of platform and even if a child has on their allotted time. Parents who are worried about always being reachable to their children in emergencies should consider Qustodio and Locategy for this reason. As a precaution, many services always allow access to the phone app in the event of an emergency. Talk to your KidsAlthough the range of features that parental control software supports is impressive, no system is perfect. If your kids want to get around the restrictions you impose, they will likely be able to do so either by using unattended devices or finding ways to wipe their devices clean from the controlling apps. Thus, it is worth taking the time to talk to your child about why you have installed monitoring software in the first place. After all, digital security are valuable topics for everyone. It's better to approach these conversations honestly, rather than get them to find out on their own and stop trusting you. Especially for older children, it is also important to listen to your child's specific privacy issues, rather than just setting rules and limitations that might otherwise be seen as arbitrary. I'm an iOS developer myself, and I know the incredible amount of thought and and that goes into creating something like this. I've read some of the other reviews and I have to say that most of the negative reviews are just silly. Of course, you need an internet connection. How else is the device will receive commands. Of course the installation is involved. Honestly though, the installation took me less than 5 minutes – and wasn't difficult at all. I can understand that some people may get confused – but frankly – you have to realize what the developers on our pact have created is no easy feat. We have tried almost every parental control app available all for our dissatisfaction. Our pact achieves 95% of what we were looking for. That said, the reason this review has the headline Almost Perfect is that there is one thing this app is missing. It is the monitoring of which websites the child goes to as well as monitoring of text messages and whatnot. But the reason I gave this app 5 stars is due to the fact that this app's purpose is not to monitor, but rather to teach kids good device habits and responsibility. Well done! Thank you for all your effort and hard work! What an amazing review. We just circulated this around the office for the whole team to see, it's feedback like this that keeps our team working hard day in and day out. Thank you so much for your honest take on OurPact, and genuine appreciation! This is really a challenging place, but we do our best to keep the app as simple and user-friendly as possible. We are so, so happy that we have helped you and your family balance technology. Thank you for your support, and for joining us in our mission to keep screens in their place. :) (Also - PS - We have your mentioned features in our request log already, but we will add these notes that are correct!) We tried for almost a year to get our teenager to regulate her own phone use to no avail. After many fights and having to remove the phone itself at bedtime we heard about this app. I'm not in any way thinking the fighting is over but at least now we don't have to look at the clock and ask her to turn it off and then argue with her. It will simply stop working. We only use the basic version for now, but will definitely consider the paid version if needed so we can turn off the phone during school. Our teen school doesn't seem to fight phone usage in class and instead sets aside class time for tech time so unfortunately any regulation will have to be done by us. My only complaint so far is that the app you put on your kids phone will arrange their home screen and all their apps every time their phone is blocked and unblocked. Not a crisis, but if this didn't happen that would be great. One less for kids to complain about 🖰 Oh and if you're a parent go read reviews for the kid version of the app Our Pact Jr Reviewers are almost all kids and reading them made me even more that this was the way to go! I laughed until I cried at the kids kids against this on your phone Such a right bunch of kids these days! We are so pleased to hear that OurPact has helped your family achieve balanced use of technology, and has reduced the conflict around devices! Just so you're aware, we have a solution to prevent the app scrambling issue at our Premium level of management. We have a free 7 day trial if you want to try it! Reach out to support@ourpact.com to learn more, or to get help setting up your kids' device with Premium!PS – we'll also get a kick out of reading through OurPact Jr reviews.. If they don't convince users that our software works, I'm not sure what would! Thanks for the positive review!! :) I absolutely love this app! I've been using it since 2016. Some apps never add new features, but developers keep coming up with more things that make my life easier and give me peace of mind. I love the new geofencing feature. My daughter tends to become a little obsessed with her electronics and it's good to eliminate distracting apps during times that she needs to do homework or access apps that can help her in daily activities. Maybe you can develop an adult version that I can use so I won't be distracted by my phone as well. :) I guess I could add my own phone to the managed devices. My daughter has some complaints though. You may not be able to do anything about this. She wondered if you could make an exception for apps that use time for time reimbursement. She laso gets very upset when she forgets to pause her time for her allowance and she gets on time. I'm just forwarding these. She has other options for music when she's home. The rest just means being willing to communicate her needs and wants in an appropriate way for me to have more time. She's still figuring this out.
